With the increasing maturity and sophistication of EUDAT's services, additional communities are seeking to apply to become members of the underpinning Collaborative Data Infrastructure (CDI) as data providers, service providers or applications developers. EUDAT has developed a Community Integration Toolkit (CIT), a key component in aiding new communities to prepare themselves to participate in the infrastructure and thus grow the adoption of EUDAT's shared services model.

This document provides an overview of initial feedback on the capabilities of the Community Integration Toolkit (CIT) in meeting the needs of these various communities.
