

21-23 November. The team responsible for training agreed priorities for activities until the end of year 1 of this, the second AARC project, and the requirements of research collaborations for technical pilots were finalised, so work on pilots can now proceed.

Interactive sessions gave an opportunity to scope the various pilots on the basis of research communities' requirements and the availability of resources both in AARC and on the research communities side. It was agreed to conclude the pilot on interoperability between EUDAT and PRACE and to start pilots to support a number of communities.

Submitted by Laura Durnford

Click here to read the full article

Laura Durnford

28th November 2017

PeaR Community News, Trust and identity

AARC project, collaboration, community, federated access

Previous Post

Next Post

COMMENTS ARE CLOSED.

ARCHIVES

Select Month ▼